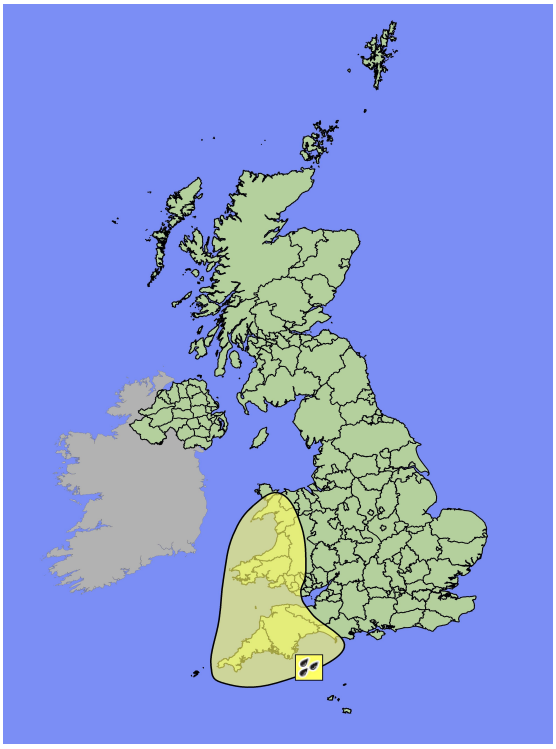
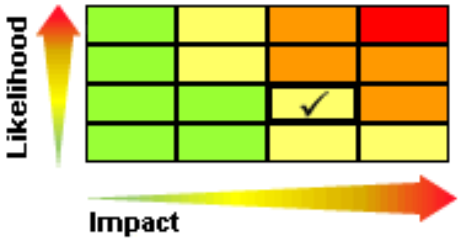
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of low pressure will become slow moving across southwest England and Wales during Tuesday night, leading to some heavy showers and thunderstorms continuing through the night. Some places will miss these showers, but where they do occur, there is the potential for 20-30 mm of rain to fall within 3 hours. Meanwhile, heavy showers and thunderstorms are expected to develop again during the day on Wednesday with the focus transferring to Wales, Cornwall and west Devon. These showers could produce 20-30 mm within 2 hours. There is a low probability of 50-60 mm falling within 3 hours during Wednesday locally in Cornwall, which has the potential to cause flooding - this aspect will be kept under review and if the likelihood increases then the warning will be upgraded.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:00 on Wed, 13th Jun 2012 until 21:00 on Wed, 13th Jun 2012

Heavy, slow moving and potentially thundery showers will affect parts of Wales and southwest England during Tuesday night, with further downpours likely to develop during Wednesday, mainly across Wales, Cornwall and west Devon. The public should be aware of the risk of localised flooding.
